

LESSON 7 WORKSHEET

Setting your intention

What do I actually want to bring to God?

Private: this worksheet is for you. You never need to share it. Your main intention may be one sentence; the prompts below simply help you find it.

Expectation or intention? (from the book, Chapter 7)

Expectation	Intention
"God must tell me whether to leave my job."	"I want to bring my fear and uncertainty about work before God, without forcing an immediate answer."
"I must forgive everything by Sunday."	"I want to become honest about the wound, and open to the next safe step towards freedom."
"I need to feel God again."	"I want to remain present with God, and truthful about the distance I feel."
"This retreat must cure my burnout."	"I want to recognise what has emptied me, and become willing to change what I can."

Look back: Lesson 5

Which of the hopes you wrote in Lesson 5 is really a request to bring to God, and which is an expectation you can now release?

Test your sentence

- ☐ Is this what I truly want to bring to God?
- ☐ Am I using general spiritual language to avoid something more specific?
- ☐ Does this sentence sound like me?
- ☐ Can I say it without pretending to feel something I do not feel?

You do not need to say more than you can safely hold.

If you cannot find an intention

"I do not know what I need. I only know I need to stop and be with you." That is a complete and honest intention.

If "It is enough" means that you do not want to remain alive, do not begin the retreat alone. Tell a trusted person and contact a qualified mental-health professional or crisis service promptly. If you may act on those thoughts or cannot keep yourself safe, contact your local emergency services now.

My intention

Read it to God in Session 1, and again in the final session, to see what has shifted.

1. What I am carrying

A few sentences about the situation I am coming from (my Lesson 4 check-in).

2. What I am asking

One sentence, to God, in plain words.

3. What I have not said

Anything else I am quietly hoping for, or have found difficult to admit.

4. What I am releasing

One sentence, letting go of a particular outcome.

For example: “God, I will not force an answer during these days. Help me receive what becomes clear, and continue patiently with what remains unresolved.”

...but I am open to what you have for me instead.
