

My Day 30 Review

Sit down for an hour, with your journal, your cards, your intention from Lesson 7, and your answers from Lesson 1. Not to grade the month, but to see it. Answer what you can; a partial review is still a review. Private: no one needs to see this page.

If any warning sign applies, act on Lesson 15 today. If you are in immediate danger, contact emergency services now.

1. Grace received. Where did you notice help, kindness, provision, truth, rest, or God's presence during the month? What happened that you did not produce through effort? Begin here, before anything is evaluated.

2. The intention. Read it again, all four parts. Session 10 asked what had shifted after three days. Ask again after thirty. What has become clearer, and what still needs attention?

3. The Lesson 1 answers. When did you last feel close to God on your own; what have you kept doing while feeling nothing; what was your "It is enough". Read them beside where you are now. Do not force a conclusion. Notice.

4. The rhythm. How often did you keep it? What helped it happen? What repeatedly prevented it? Did it become easier, more natural, or more life-giving? Keep, shrink, move, or replace it.

5. The cards. Which became actions, conversations, help, or release? Of those remaining, which should move to the testing pile, which need a different kind of help, and which can simply be let go?

6. The unresolved. What remains open without needing to be forced? Name it, and leave it named.

7. The help. If Lesson 15 applied, did you act? If not, what is the one step this week?

8. The next pause. Choose one you will keep: a three-hour reset next month, a day in three months, or a retreat within the year. If you wrote a purpose sentence in Session 9, read it too. Does it still fit?

My next pause, and its date:

What the month has been

One paragraph, dated. Then close the journal. The month is finished.

Date:
