

Your moment, and your person

Jesus and the Practice of Withdrawing

Answer honestly. Keep this page private.

1. Of the five moments, which one is closest to where you are right now: after demand, in loss, before a decision, in a season of testing, or facing something hard? Write a sentence about why.

2. Where possible, who is one trustworthy person you could tell about your retreat? If you do not yet have someone you trust, what pastor, counsellor, mature believer or supportive community could you begin approaching?

3. Jesus told the Father exactly what he wanted in Gethsemane. When did you last pray a prayer that honest, and what stops you?

4. What would help you reduce avoidable interruptions without becoming anxious or resentful when a genuine need arises?

If solitude brings up grief or pain that feels too heavy to carry alone, speak with someone you trust before you go further. If you are in danger, or thinking about harming yourself, do not wait for a retreat: contact emergency services or a crisis service where you are, and a trusted person, now.
